A LETTER FROM THE CHAIRWOMAN

A year of momentum

Every year, we have the opportunity to look back at how far we've come and look ahead at how much further we must go. This year is no different. It is a year of momentum, of deepening our impact, and of staying true to the belief that has always driven us: every child deserves a safe, stable, and loving family.

Over the past two and a half decades, we've walked alongside children separated from their families, trained caregivers, empowered social workers, and reunited families. We've responded with compassion, urgency, and innovation. Through it all, one thing has become increasingly clear: if we want lasting change, we must fix the system.

The future of child welfare is about building systems that help families succeed long after a child returns home. Our focus is on creating lasting stability, ensuring children remain safely with their families, strengthening the supports that help families thrive, and reducing the likelihood that children ever re-enter the system. By combining data, technology, and family-centered solutions, we are helping reshape the way child welfare is designed and delivered.

This is bold work. It requires collaboration across sectors, public-private partnerships, tech-enabled tools like our ThriveWell™ platform, and the belief that all children deserve not just a safe place to sleep, but the chance to thrive in a loving family.

As we look ahead, we're not slowing down; we're accelerating. Every partnership forged, every family stabilized, and every system strengthened brings us closer to a world where no child grows up without the love and permanence they deserve. We are more determined than ever, and we are grateful you are with us on this journey. Thank you for standing with us, believing in this mission, and being part of this movement.

Leslie Beasley, Chairwoman

"One thing has become increasingly clear: if we want lasting change, we must fix the system."

THE PROBLEM IN PERSPECTIVE

Right now, 5.4 million children are living in orphanages worldwide

400,000+

Children and youth are in US foster care at any given time.

80%

Of the children in orphanages have a living parent, whom they could live with if given the proper support.

Around the world, millions of children grow up without the love and support of a family, yet most have at least one living parent who, with the right help, could raise them. We exist to solve this problem, and you make that work possible. The problem isn't a shortage of people who care about children. It's that we've built systems that are better at replacing families than strengthening them. When a child grows up loved, safe, and supported, everything changes: families grow stronger, communities thrive, and that change sustains itself for generations.

STORY FROM THE FIELD

Home is worth fighting for

Keerthi was seven years old when her world changed. After her father's death, her mother, a construction worker in Tamil Nadu, was left raising four children alone with no safety net. Out of love, not abandonment, she placed Keerthi and one of her siblings in a child care institution (CCI), hoping they would at least have food, shelter, and a chance at school.

What happened next is what Miracle Foundation exists to make possible.

Recognizing that poverty, not a lack of love, had separated this family, our team worked alongside Keerthi's mother through counseling, livelihood support, and connections to government welfare programs until she was back on her feet. In August 2022, Keerthi and her sister came home.

But the work didn't stop there. It never does. When Keerthi's mother passed away in an accident shortly after, our team was still there. Keerthi's uncle stepped in, and our continued support, counseling, scholarships, and career guidance made sure grief didn't become the end of their story. Today, Keerthi is in Grade 11, her elder sister is finishing university, and the younger siblings are in school. They are together. They are moving forward.

Reunification is not a single moment. It's a relationship built over time, and Keerthi's family is why we never walk away.

STORY FROM THE FIELD

Lived experience, leading the way

No one understands what children in care need more than the people who have lived it. That belief isn't just something we say; it's the foundation of our work. At Miracle Foundation, people with lived experience aren't consulted after decisions are made. They're in the room when decisions are being made. They're on our team. They're leading our programs. And this year, they were on a global stage.

Our Youth Ambassadors Program in India is proof of what becomes possible when you actively center the people closest to the problem. Youth Ambassadors are young people who grew up in orphanages or child care institutions (CCIs) and who now use that experience as a foundation for advocacy, leadership, and change.

This year, we welcomed a new cohort of 5 Ambassadors to our team. They are driving real conversations about children's rights, family-based care, and the future of child welfare at the community level, the institutional level, and now the international level.

Leading that work is Albert Justin. Albert grew up in a CCI in Tamil Nadu, India, separated from his family at an early age after the loss of his parents. Today, he is the Lead of Miracle Foundation's Youth Program in India. This year, Albert represented Miracle Foundation on a global scale at the International Conference on Alternative Care for Children, speaking in the Care-Experienced Youth Sharing Session to an audience of policymakers, practitioners, and advocates.

That moment matters. Not just because of the stage, but because of what it represents when we say we center lived experience. Albert's voice was in that room because it belongs there and because the best solutions for children in care will always come from people who know that journey firsthand.

OUR IMPACT

Young people leading lasting change

Children and young people are at the heart of every decision we make. We don't see them as beneficiaries of change. We see them as partners in creating it. Through youth leadership groups and Bal Panchayats (Child Parliaments), young people identify challenges, advocate for solutions, and help shape stronger communities. By equipping them with the tools, confidence, and support to lead, we're building sustainable change that extends far beyond one generation.

STORY FROM THE FIELD

Support that shows up in real time

When a family is struggling, timing is everything. A check-in that comes two weeks late, buried under paperwork and scheduling, doesn't meet a family in their moment of need. That's the gap our app, ThriveWell™, was built to close. And this year, we saw more clearly than ever what it means when the right support shows up at the right time.

Miracle Foundation's ThriveWell platform served more than 2,000 children across the United States. For every child served, ThriveWell gives social workers a real-time window into how they and their families are doing, not through forms filed days later, but in the moment. When something is hard, someone knows. When a family is wobbling, support doesn't wait for the next scheduled meeting.

A foster family having a particularly difficult day with their child noted it in ThriveWell. Within seconds, their social worker saw it, picked up the phone, and arranged for a meal to be delivered that evening. It sounds like a small gesture, but for that family, it was the difference between giving up and keeping going. They later shared that the real-time encouragement gave them the confidence to stay the course, and that child stayed in a stable, loving home because of it.

That story isn't the exception. It's the point. Behind every one of those 2,000 children is a family doing their best, and what we know, from years of this work, is that families succeed when they are seen, supported, and not left to figure it out alone. ThriveWell is how we bring that truth to scale, ensuring that no difficult day goes unnoticed, no family falls through the cracks, and no child loses a stable home because help arrived too late.

Knowing when to call

For Angelheart, Inc., a Texas-based foster care and adoption agency, the mission has always been simple: put the child first. Before ThriveWell™, a family could have a hard day on Tuesday, and a case manager might not find out until the following week. For 22 case managers each supporting 15 to 16 children, that lag wasn't just inefficient; it was a gap that families could slip through. ThriveWell closed it. With real-time check-ins and a live dashboard, Angelheart's team can now be proactive rather than reactive, saving an estimated one to two hours per manager per week and redirecting that time back to the children and families who need it most. Today, 92% of Angelheart's families are actively using the platform.

Through our strategic partnership with Amazon Web Services (AWS), Miracle Foundation is transforming how child welfare professionals support vulnerable children and families. ThriveWell™, powered by AWS, provides real-time insights, centralized family information, and data-driven decision support that help social workers identify risks earlier, coordinate services more effectively, and strengthen outcomes for children.

AWS technology enables ThriveWell to securely connect care teams, streamline case management, and surface actionable insights that support family preservation, reunification, and long-term child well-being. Together, Miracle Foundation and AWS are advancing innovative, scalable solutions that help more children remain safely with or reunify with their families and thrive.

Terry and Louie

When we shared our vision for helping more children in child welfare, Louie and Terry didn't just listen; they jumped in with both feet. We told them we needed three things: money, minutes, and a megaphone. They delivered all three.

They generously invested in the work, spent countless hours helping us think through how to expand our reach and impact in the U.S., and then handed us an incredible megaphone through Carols for Tots, their annual fundraiser that turns Christmas carols on social media into support for children. Louie and Terry embody the very best of philanthropy. They give not only their resources, but also their wisdom, influence, creativity, and hearts.

We are deeply grateful for all they do and the difference they are making in the lives of vulnerable children and families.

We are deeply grateful to Guru Krupa for their dedicated partnership and heartfelt commitment to children and families in Tamil Nadu. Their continued support has been instrumental in advancing our reunification work in the region, helping ensure that more children grow up where they belong, within the love and care of their own families. We are proud to work alongside Guru Krupa and are thankful for their shared belief that every child deserves a place to call home.
